Immuno-oncology innovator receives life science people's choice award

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Nov. 07, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Bioinformatics Inc., the leading research and advisory firm serving the life science tool market, today announced Fluidigm as the Company to Watch in 2019 at the biannual Life Science Industry Awards® (LSIA).

Designed as people's choice awards, LSIA has been a tradition in the life science industry for 15 years. Recipients are selected based on responses from thousands of scientists who are members of The Science Advisory Board, the world's largest market research panel of scientific customers. Winners are chosen based on both the number of votes received and the depth of the company's customer loyalty and satisfaction.

"We are excited to recognize Fluidigm as the Company to Watch in 2019," said Craig Overpeck, CEO of Bioinformatics Inc. "Fluidigm is demonstrating impressive momentum, exemplified by the recent introduction of the Hyperion™ Imaging System for highdefinition tissue imaging. Their innovative solutions for immuno-oncology research have ignited significant interest within our community and have the potential to revolutionize this important field for many years to come."

"It is an honor to receive this LSIA award," said Chris Linthwaite, President and CEO of Fluidigm. "We have made significant progress in empowering our customers with industry-leading technologies to uncover meaningful insights in health and disease, with an emphasis on immunology, cancer and immuno-oncology research.
